¹ This Advisory was revised on November 30, 2021. The credit amount of $74,300 applies for estates of decedents dying on or after January 1, 2022, as noted in the original Advisory. However, under the revised Advisory, the threshold amount has been changed to $1,648,611 for decedents dying on or after January 1, 2022; two hyperlinks have changed; and a reference to a year has been revised.

BACKGROUND AND EXPLANATION

Legislation enacted in 2014 made a number of changes to Rhode Island's estate tax. For example, the new law established a Rhode Island estate tax credit of $64,400, shielding $1.5 million in assets from the tax -- for decedents dying on or after January 1, 2015.

The new law also established that, starting January 1, 2016, the credit would be adjusted by the percentage increase (if any) in the consumer price index for all urban consumers (CPI-U), determined as of September 30 of the prior calendar year. The adjustment would be rounded up to the nearest $5.00 increment.

The U.S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS) announced on October 13, 2021, that the index (before seasonal adjustment) had risen 5.4% over the previous 12 months (through September 2021).²

Accordingly, for decedents dying on or after January 1, 2022, the credit amount shall be $74,300, shielding from taxation the first $1,648,611 of an estate. Thus, in general, for a decedent dying in 2022, a net taxable estate valued at $1,648,611 or less will not be subject to Rhode Island's estate tax.

(In certain circumstances, the Rhode Island estate tax will not apply regardless of the estate's size: Rhode Island General Laws Chapter 44-22 provides full details on the computation of the tax, including such factors as the marital and charitable deductions.)
